Welcome to the Alachua County Public Schools interactive map to illustrate potential school attendance zone boundary changes. Based on the workshops with the School Board held on February 26 and March 3, each school level (elementary, middle, and high school) has one draft of attendance zone changes that can be displayed, along with the current school zones and the school locations. The draft scenarios are displayed as hollow frames overlain on the multi-colored, current school zones allowing for a comparison of the potential changes. Here are some step-by-step instructions to follow to begin using the map to review each of the draft zone scenarios.

Overview.jpg

Upon loading the map, you will see an outline of the proposed Draft scenario for ACPS Elementary Schools and the current elementary school locations displayed.

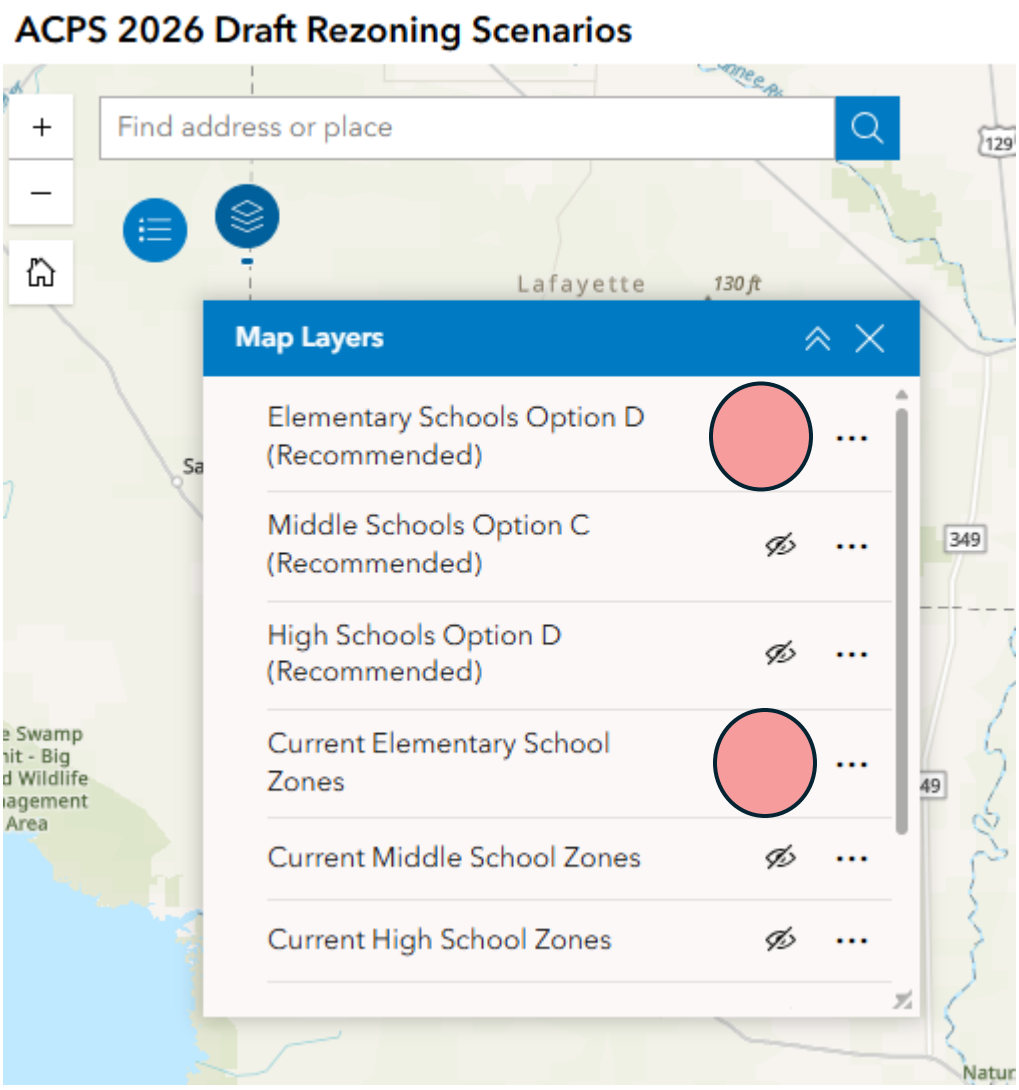

To change or display additional layers in the map, press the Map Layers symbol (circled in red) to access the dropdown menu of the layers organized by school level. You should see a menu list for High Schools, Middle Schools, and Elementary Schools.

To access additional draft maps from a different level, toggle each layer on/off, activate the Eye symbol to the right of each layer in the list (red circle on the right).

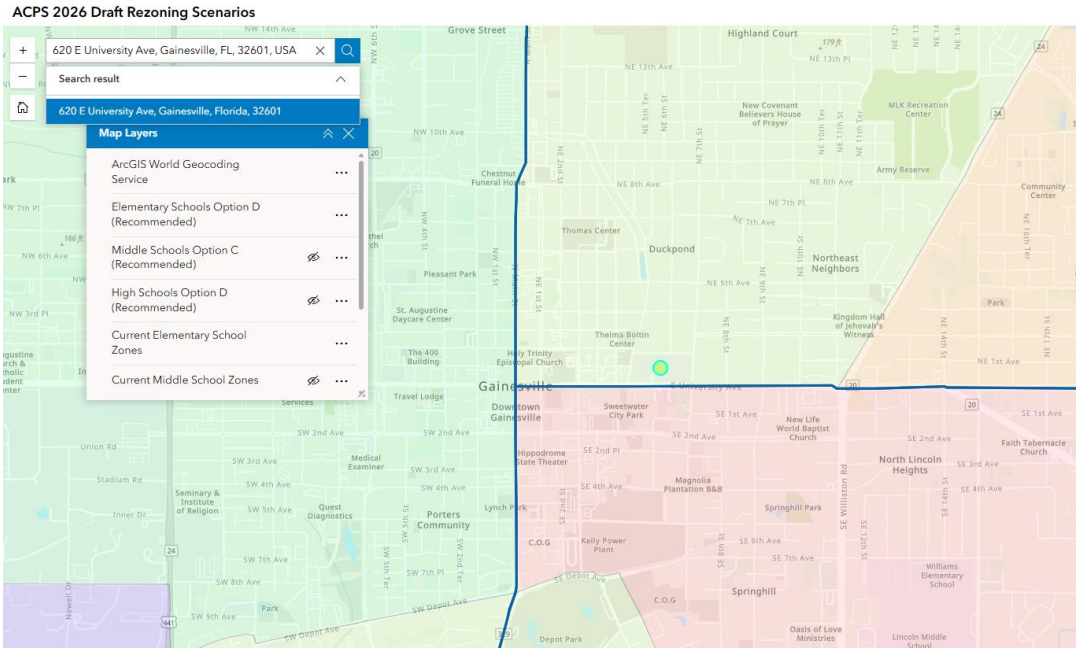

In this example, the eye symbol is “on” for the “Elementary Schools Option D”.

To compare each draft scenario to the current zones, select the Eye symbol for both the “Current High School Zone” and the draft scenario you wish to view.

Reminder- To display a different school level (in this example, middle or elementary schools), you will want to deselect the school level layer group you are currently viewing.

To view a specific location or address, access the Search tool in the top left corner of the map (in the red rectangle on the left). Enter the full address including the city and zip code for best results. Once an address is located, it may appear in the search results drop down window below the Seach tool. Select the Magnifying Glass symbol to enable the search and zoom to the location (green dot in the red square on the right).
